

ANIMAL RIGHTS VS BABYRIGHTS

In 2007, Michael Vick, the NFL quarterback, was convicted of operating an illegal inter-state dog-fighting ring in Virginia. He pleaded guilty to hanging and drowning between 6-8 dogs—dogs that didn't perform well. He served 21 months in federal prison for his felonies. The animal rights activists were outraged by his crime. Mr. Vick's crime was atrocious. There is no doubt about that. No one has the right to torture, abuse and murder any of God's creatures. So, within that context, I ask: why is abortion still legal in this country? If the murder of 6-8 dogs warrants 21 months of prison time, then how come the murder of an innocent pre-born baby warrants nothing? It is this double-standard that is sickening.

When animals have more rights than babies, there is a problem. Animals are treated as gods in America with their mobile grooming trucks, organic food, in-house bathing stations, clothing and full-service doggie day care centers, million-dollar pet adoption centers, stores devoted to pets, millions in pet-adoption advertising. Meanwhile babies continue being slaughtered in every deathcamp across America. G.K. Chesterton once said, "Wherever there is animal worship there is human sacrifice." (The Uses of Diversity)

It's sad to me that there are more pet-adoption centers, pet grooming stores and mobile pet spas than there are crisis pregnancy centers. It's disgusting that a pet can have a pedicure while babies are being butchered on a daily basis.

It's sad to me that there are more pet-adoption centers, pet grooming stores and mobile pet spas than there are crisis pregnancy centers. It's disgusting that a pet can have a pedicure while babies are being butchered on a daily basis. When a stray dog is in the middle of the road, how many drivers actually try to hit the dog? No one does. Not even atheist drivers try to hit the dog. Why? Because people know that life is valuable. It's so valuable that scientists still can't create it in the laboratory. It's so valuable that our technology can't sustain life indefinitely (by medicine or machines). Now, if a dog is valuable—how much more valuable is the baby in the womb? If drivers are willing to protect a stray dog from being killed, then why not protect the baby from the abortionist's knife? That is the hypocrisy I see in society.

One last thing to consider: how would the Pro-Choicers feel if a man started killing dogs and cats (stray or not) because he felt that "birth control just wasn't doing enough"? Wouldn't that be sick? That's what abortion does. It says, birth control isn't doing enough to stop the number of births a year, so we will offer a fail-proof, turn-key solution that will bring the number of births down for sure.

Pathetic

THAT KITTENS HAVE MORE RIGHTS THAN PRE-BORN HUMAN BABIES.